THE WIVES OF ANCIENT GREECE.—They were usually married when very young. Their occupations were to weave, to spin, to embroider, to superintend the household, to care for their sick slaves. They lived in a special and retired part of the house. The more wealthy seldom went abroad, and never except when accompanied by a female slave; never attended the public spectacles; received no male visitors except in the presence of their husbands, and had not even a seat at their own tables when male guests were there. Their pre-eminence was fidelity, and it is probable that this was very strictly and very generally observed. (On the other hand, living as they did, almost exclusively among their female slaves, deprived of all the educating influence of male society, and having no place at those public spectacles, which were the chief means of Athenian culture, their minds must necessarily have been exceedingly contracted. Thucydides doubtless expressed the prevailing sentiment of his countrymen, when he said that the highest merit of women is, not to be spoken of either for good or evil, and Phidias illustrated the same feeling when he represented the heavenly Aphrodite standing on a tortoise, typifying thereby the secluded life of a virtuous woman. In the writings of Xenophon we have a charming picture of a husband who had received into his arms his young wife of fifteen, absolutely ignorant of the world and its ways. He speaks to her with extreme kindness, but in the language that would be used to a little child. Her task, he tells her, is to be like a queen bee, dwelling continually at home, and superintending the work of her slaves. She must distribute to each their tasks, must economize the family income, and must take especial care that the house is strictly orderly—the shoes, the pots, and the clothes, always in their places. It is also, he tells her, a part of her duty to tend her sick slaves; but here his wife interrupted him, exclaiming, "Nay, but that will indeed be the most agreeable of my offices, if such as I treat with kindness are likely to be grateful and to love me more than before." With a very tender and delicate care to avoid everything resembling reproach, the husband persuades his wife to give up the habits of wearing high heeled boots, in order to appear tall, and of coloring her face with vermilion and white lead. He promised her that if she faithfully performs her duties, he will himself be the first and most devoted of her slaves.

MANIA FOR MURDER.—One of the most remarkable of the many trials for murder which have recently darkened the pages of the English criminal calendar was that of Agnes Norman, a girl of fifteen years of age, who seems to have been possessed with a passion for taking life. This monomania, if such it may be called, was not only manifested in the smothering, or strangulation, of infants committed to her charge as nursery maid; but the evidence before the coroner's jury went to show that her murderous propensities extended to cats, canary birds, and other little pets of the various families in which she had taken service. About the middle of last month she was tried before the Criminal Court at London—indictments having been found against her for compassing the death of four children, and one other indictment "for feloniously attempting to strangle another child with intent to murder him."

The four first-mentioned indictments were for the willful murder of Minnie Milner; for the willful murder of Thomas Milner; for the willful murder of John Stuart Taylor, and for the willful murder of Jesse Jane Beer.

In all these cases it appears to have been difficult to bring the killing of the children directly home to her. All of them are reported to have been evidently when put in her charge, and all had evidently died from suffocation. But it was impossible, from the fact of their being infants, to ascertain whether they were accidentally suffocated by turning over in bed, or whether the girl had deliberately smothered them. Nevertheless, whilst legal proof of the fact could not be adduced, there was quite enough in the evidence adduced to render it extremely probable that in every one of the cases mentioned the child met its death at her hands.

Only one of the indictments for murder was tried, and this, failing, the others were not pressed.

A REMARKABLE DREAM VERIFIED.—The Louisville Commercial of Tuesday says: Yesterday a gentleman of the highest character, a minister of the gospel, related to us the following remarkable facts, which were furnished him by Rev. I. N. Thompson, a well-known Methodist minister of Southern Indiana, and formerly presiding elder of the Mitchell district. One of Mr. Thompson's parishioners had a very singular dream, which ran about as follows, as he related it to his family the next morning. He dreamed that in walking through one of his pasture fields, he came upon a certain tree, near the path he was following, and which had an opening, from rot, on one side. Near the foot of this tree, coiled alongside the path, he saw in a dream a large yellow rattlesnake, and this snake, his dream told him, had bitten him. After relating the dream to his family the next morning, he concluded to go to the pasture, and there beside the path at the foot of the half-rotted tree, lay coiled up a large rattlesnake. Seizing a small limb from a tree lying near, he struck at the snake, but in doing so his foot slipped and he fell upon the poisonous reptile, which bit him upon the cheek. He hastened to his home, nearly a quarter of a mile distant, where, two hours later, he died in great agony. This story is an almost incredible one, but it comes to us from such a high source that we cannot doubt its truth.

GEO. L. SEATON,
HOUSE CARPENTER AND BUILDER.
Having resumed my old business as House Carpenter and Builder, at the old stand, north-east corner of Wolfe and Washington streets, I ask that my friends and the public give me a share of their patronage, promising me that all work given in my charge shall receive prompt attention, and shall be done in a substantial and workmanlike manner and upon the most moderate terms. Many thanks for past favors.

DRUGS AND CHEMICALS.

SIMMONS' LIVER
The symptoms of Liver Complaint are uneasiness and pain in the side. Sometimes the pain is in the shoulder, and is mistaken for rheumatism. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness, bowels in general constive, sometimes alternating with lax. The head is troubled with pain, and dull, heavy sensation, considerable loss of memory, accompanied with painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. Often complaining of weakness, debility and low spirits. Sometimes many of the above symptoms attend the disease, and at other times very few of them; but the liver is generally the organ most involved. Cure the Liver with

THE FOLLOWING WILL BE READ WITH INTEREST:
Under date of April 28th, 1871, Dr. HENRY J. ROGERS, 68 Sharp street, Baltimore, an eminent physician, writes regarding

CRYSTAL DISCOVERY:
"It affords me much pleasure to bear testimony as to the efficacy of your Crystal Discovery. Some years since, while in India, I suffered from a severe fever peculiar to the country. On my recovering, a patch of hair on the left side of my head became perfectly white, without at all affecting the remainder. To remove this unsightly appearance, I had recourse to various preparations, both in Europe and in this country; but they all had one great defect—they dyed the hair black. Now, with your Crystal Discovery, I can get the desired shade—the natural color of my hair being dark brown. I consider your Discovery the best preparation I know of."
Yours truly,
HENRY J. ROGERS.

Now as the fact becomes more patent every day that the various dirty and filthy preparations advertised as Renewers, Restoratives, &c., are but compounds of Sugar of Lead and Sulphur, and therefore should be shunned by all who value their health, it is scarcely a matter of surprise that the demand for NATTANS' CRYSTAL DISCOVERY, admitted to be perfectly harmless, and yet accomplish all, and more, than the poisonous articles claim to do, should have increased so rapidly. It restores the color and growth of the hair positively in a few days; strengthens the roots, makes an excellent dressing, soiling neither clothes nor scalp; but on the contrary it gives the scalp a pure and clearly look, removing all dandruff and scurf. It is the most economical preparation in use. Put up in large bottles, at one dollar.
